terday, and to his superb pitching can be attributed the defeat of the Browns. Two hits and one run were the extent of the locals' batting. New York's fancy-paid all-star troupe got nine hits and three runs off Donahue. In the fourth inning Burkett made a twobase hit and in the sixth inning Donahue made a single. This was all there was doing in the hitting line. For seven innings the best any of the local sluggers could do was to raise up a little pop fly that lit squarely in the hands of some fielder, or put down easy infield taps to the New Yorkers. For the first three innings St. Louis's star sluggers rehearsed the "one-two-three" act to the great satisfaction of their guests. In the seventh and eighth innings the locals repeated their performance of the first three innings, going out in one-two-three order. only thirty-one batters faced New York's treat twirler.

Apparently Griffith's delivery consisted of nothing more than a floater that wobbled its way up to the plate like a truant toy balloon. In reality Griffith's delivery consisted of the choicest assortment of mixed pitching dainties yet dished up to the overhungry batters of McAleer's team.

His control was also of the best, allowing but one "Brownie" to walk. Ag a pitching exhibition Griffith's work was easily the best seen here this season.

Donahue, who twirled for the locals, pitched a good game. 'Red' had everything that a pitcher needs, but no man had a chance to win against Griffith's twirling. Had it not been for costly errors of Wathce and Burkett the game would probably have gone into extra innings. The fact that no extra innings were played is not to be lamented, for the locals, batting at the speed they showed yesterday, would not have secured another bingle if fifty innings had been played.

Griffith had the Frowns faded and they realized it. The point was forcibly demonstrated in the last inning. With Wallace at bat and two out, Anderson quietly sat on the bench awaiting the execution of the in-Both errors figured in the New York's run column. When Wallace made his bobble "King Jack" O'Connor ambled his way across the plate. Burkett's error in the sixth inning assisted Ganzel in scoring. HOW THE RUNS WERE MADE New York scored two runs in the third.

O'Connor singled and went to third on Griffith's two-base hit. Davis grassed to Wallace and Bobby gave an exhibition of finger billiards with the ball. By the time Wallace had the ball nursed back into his hand, O'Connor had crossed the plate. Keeler walked. Fultz fanned. Williams flew to Burkett and Griffith beat the throw to the

A chapter of the Sigma Nu fraternity was installed in Washington University last night with eight charter members The installation exercises were performed by the local Alumni Association and a party from Gamma NI Chapter, which has just been established at the State School of Mines in Rolla.

The initiation of the neophytes took place
on the fifth floor and bushery of a college fraternity surrounded the exercises.

The eight candidates were stationed in an anteroom, and brought before the body
one at a time. Before the finish their loud cries and the laughter of the initiators had drawn a goodly crowd of persons who had bushess in the Odd Fellows' building to the fifth floor, and many were the questions propounded to the building employes in regard to the source of the unusual sounds.
The exercises were presided over by Vice Regent and General Inspector Jones of Davenport, I.a., and Inspector of the Fourth Division, John D. Pugh of Kansas City.
There are at present but three fraternities
of national standing in Washington University.
The fraternity spirit is expected to be much stronger when the institution moves to its new buildings, and the students are more segregated. Anticipaling the influx of fraternities the Sigma Nu chanter was

New York, May 23.-Captain Patsy Donovan of the Cardinals was ordered off the field and out of the Pole Grounds to-day by Umpire Johnstone of the National League for taking exception in a mild form to a ruling made by the umpire.

Yesterday's Results.

As Donovan took up his coat and started to leave the field the vast throng hissed and hooted Johnstone, who, mortified and angered beyond expression delayed the game until Captain Pat had gone beyond the ropes.
The decision which brought about the St.
Louis captain's humiliation was toward the end of the seventh linning. Donovan was on third base and tried to steal home. He sild to the plate, the New York catcher not get-ting closer than a foot of him with the ball, according to the statements of half a dozen of those who were within distance to pass judgment on the play. Johnstone, however, deciared Donovan out, As he rose to his feet, the St. Louis captain remarked

Donovan, who had just got through run-ning the bases and was somewhat winded, retorted in a subdued tone: "All right; wat a second till I get my wind."

"Get out of the field and off the grounds!" roared Johnstone, now stung to the quick by Donevan's cool demeanor. The St. Louis captain picked up his coat and started out. When the immense crowd learned what Johnstone had done they set up a hissing, which insted until the St. Louis player disappeared from view.

After the unpleasantness Captain Donovan said:

"I do not want to criticise the umpire. It is the duty of all managers to uphoid his decision, I was not out, however. He just made a mistake; that's all there is to it. He has umpired about twenty-four out of our thirty-two games, and at times his decisions have been exasperating, but I never complained. The St. Louis captain picked up his coat stons have been exasperating, but I never complained.

"Testerday before we started the game, however, I went to him because of some very trying decisions on the previous day, and asked him, as I had a right to, to remember that there were two teams playing and one had as much right to win as the other. There was no sting in what I said, and I believe I selected the proper time to enter a mild protest, It is barely possible this protest rancored in him, and he took the first opportunity to vent his spleen. I have no fault to find with him.

"He can justify his action to-day, though, there was no dispute whatever, and since I am viscently opposed to argument on the field, would hardly give him cause to take such summary action."

brothers. The other members of the nine had had a heart-to-heart talk with Captain Donovan over night, and the result, combined with the O'Neills, was what took the native rooters by surprise.

To show the "brace" was no bluff-also, as it appeared later, that even the Mc-Ginnity may lose a game, the Cardinals' first batsman, Farrel, walked and Brain scored him with a single, Hackett hit Mc-Ginnity safely and Gant McGann, on a wild throw to third, brought home Brain. Two runs to start.

McGann singled in the first, and in the second Babb doubled prettily, and Warner took him to the fold with a single. That was all the effective work the Giants could do with the O'Neills until the nint Inning.

GAME WAS EXCITING.

More than 16,000 persons witnessed the exciting finish of what was one of the most interesting contests seen at the Polo ground; this season. For nine long innings McGraw tried to turn on the snocks of victory from the "power-house."

Shaking their experiment pitchers, the Cardinals trotted out the famous O'Neill brothers. The other members of the nine had had a heart-to-heart talk with Captain Donovan over 1980.
